METHOD USED:

ERV: I relaxed my body, used my energy conversion box and started to view. I saw a female person with black hair and a round face. She has a small, round mole on the left side of her face, just above her mouth but below her nose. I saw other things but I could not make them out clearly. I told myself to find the "location" of the target. I then saw grass, a tree and a yellow stake. My feet were right next to the yellow stake, as if I were going to trip over it. Then I went outside.

I started at the "starting tree" and immediately walked toward a direction. I stopped and found myself in front of a large tree. I was just about to place my "knife" in the ground when I was drawn to the left. I walked toward the left and saw another large tree. I continued to walk in that direction when I saw the yellow stakes. I was shocked to see them out there because I had not previously known they were there. I walked toward the stakes and realized I was walking beyond the set boundaries. I walked back to the large tree and was confused as to whether to put my "knife" next to that tree or next to the first one. I decided to put it next to the first tree where I had first stopped.
